miles on a front of eight miles, and achieved the important capture of Roys.

The German communiques make curious reading. The accounts of purely imaginary victories that they contain, and the statement that the retirement is voluntary, show how the High Command fear to tell their people the truth. Despite their efforts to hide the real state of affairs at the front, the despondency that pervades their armies is rapidly spreading through Germany. Public uneasiness has manifested itself in many directions.

General von Stein, Minister for War, has tried to relieve the situation by stating that everything is going according to plan, and that the offensive will be resumed at the proper time. He concludes his statement with an earnest appeal to the people's particitism, and sternly reminds them that "he who countenances any influence which will have a disintegrating effect and will cause a wakening of the determination of the desired particitism, and sternly reminds them that "he who countenances any influence which will have a disintegrating effect and will cause a wakening of the determination of the determ ment with an earnest appeal to the people's particitism, and aternly reminds them that "he who countenances any influence which will have a distintegrating effect and will cause a weakening of the determination of our people to attain a victorious conclusion of this war for existence sina against the Fatherland's cause." Another method by which an effort is being made to allay public feeling is the sending of military officers to lecture on the situation. Thus an officer of the General Staff who speke at Brealau on Monday declared that "the German aim now is not to gain ground, but to disorganise and destroy the enemy's attacking material." The abandoment of over 1,700 gans during the past month seems a curious way in which to effect this hope. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs tude of German's defeat may serve for a time, but the German people are bound to learn before long that there is good ground for dejection. BLADE Economy

The "Valet" AutoStrop is the only safety razor with a self-contained automatic stropping device, and for this reason its blades last, on an average, four times as long as those of the "no-stropping" type. Probably because of this advantage, and also of the cheapness of "Valet" blades, the public do not always exercise economy in their use. The following hints will enable users to get even more than the two months' service which is claimed as the average life of a single "Valet" AutoStrop blade.

> Use no abrasive strop dressing, and keep your strop free from grit.

> Don't over-strop-10 seconds daily will keep your blade in the pink of condition. Don't let anything hard touch the blade edge.

Hold the blade almost flat against the face.

It shaves better, besides lasting longer. There is no shortage of "Valet" blades at present, but in view of constantly increasing manufacturing difficulties reasonable
